SEVEN SUITS FILED FRIDAY FOR $500 EACH.

Alleged Violation of Kentucky Insurance Laws.

REBATING IS CHARGED.

Cases Will Not Come Up Until Next Term.

The Commonwealth now has seven suits pending in the Christian Circuit Court, wherein the State Life Insurance Company, of Indianapolis, Ind., and its agents, C. C. Claypool and M. G. Caldwell are made defendants. These suits were brought by Commonwealth's Attorney, Hon. Denny P. Smith. The substance of the petition is, briefly: That the said defendants are doing a general life insurance business in Kentucky, and that two of its agents, Claypool and Caldwell, within one year before the filing of this action, unlawfully, wilfully and knowingly made a contract with parties named in this action, other than is plainly expressed in the policy of life insurance issued. And that said defendants did offer, pay and allow to said parties as an inducement to take said insurance a valuable consideration which was not specified in the contracts.

The payment or allowance, it is alleged, is a violation of the laws of Kentucky and against the peace and dignity of the Commonwealth, and is what is known as "rebating" on the premium of a life insurance policy.

There are seven suits of the same character, the grounds for each being the same, and a judgment for $500 in each case is asked for.

These cases will probably create quite a sensation in local life insurance circles and the outcome will be watched with general interest.

ACTION POSTPONED.

County Committee Reports Progress, But Asks Further Time.

The Democratic County Committee met yesterday with 25 of the 29 precincts represented. Chairman West, of the sub-committee, reported progress, but said the ticket was not completed.

The sub-committee asked to be discharged, which was done and after some discussion another was appointed and action postponed till July 31. The convention was also ordered for the same day, as in the former action.

The new committee is composed of Chairman Jas. West, J. B. Walker, J. W. Riley, T. D. Jameson and F. I. Fraser.

It had a meeting yesterday afternoon and all details are well in hand. A ticket will be named next month.

LOST THEIR CHILD.

Little Daughter of Thomas Yancey Passes Away.

A little daughter of Mr. Thos. Yancey, who resides on the Greenville road, about three miles northeast of the city, died Saturday night. Deceased was one year old and had been sick about ten days with bowel trouble. The interment took place in the family burying ground Sunday.

Skull Crushed.

The dead body of an unknown negro man was found lying near the L. & N. railroad track, about two miles South of Mannington, yesterday morning. The negro's skull was crushed. No papers were found on his person, by which he could be identified. It is not known whether he was struck by the train or was murdered by some one and placed along side of the track. The coroner was notified and went to Mannington to hold an inquest, but had not returned when we went to press.

Boy Stabbed.

Walter Bradley, aged 15, was cut in eleven places on Owensboro Saturday, by Tony Richey. They were wrestling and Richey began cutting the boy before he realized that the man was mad.

A REIGN OF BLOODSHED

And Half a Dozen Negroes Shot.

BLOODY WINDUP OF A FESTIVAL AT PEE DEE.

One Negro Man Killed And Two Others Hit By Bullets.

GENERAL FUSILLADE.

So Many Shots Were Fired That It Is Not Known Who Did the Killing.

Near Pee Dee Saturday night, or rather at 1:30 Sunday morning, a general shooting affray broke up a festival at the U. B. F. hall, which was crowded with negroes at the time the shooting began. There had been a barbecue during the previous day, given by Tibb Davie and there was more or less drinking indulged in.

Suddenly in the midst of the festivities a negro man named Oscar White, a freeman on Mr. Ed Jones' farm, threw a bottle of beer against the wall, smashing it to pieces.

Ed Greenwade and other negroes began shooting at White and a fusillade followed, many shots being fired. The number was estimated at from 75 to 100.

There was a stampede some jumping from windows and others running over each other at the door. When the fight was over and the smoke had cleared away, Oscar White was lying dead just outside the door and two other negroes were wounded. Marshall Averitt was shot in the neck and in the stomach and will probably die. John Chambers was shot in the hand, but not dangerously hurt.

It was reported that Jennie Dulin was also shot, but this proved to be a mistake. She was probably hurt in the flight from the room, but was able to keep on running.

Some of the negroes did not stop running until they reached their homes three miles away. The drunken rowdies ran outside and shot at negroes who were disappearing in the darkness.

The body of White was left where he fell until nine o'clock Sunday morning, when it was taken away. Coroner Allensworth arrived on the scene at noon and held an inquest.

Jack Howell testified that Ed Greenwade shot five times, but not at White. Tibb Davie said Greenwade shot three times. But little else could be learned. The jury found a verdict fixing the crime on Greenwade and charging him with murder. A warrant has been issued for his arrest.

THIRD REPRIEVE

For Vermont Woman Murderer Until Dec. 8.

Brattleboro, Vt., June 25.—Reprieve until December 8 for Mrs. Mary M. Rogers was signed this afternoon by Gov. Bell, and for the third time the woman, who was to have been hanged Friday for the killing of her husband, was saved through the operation of the governor's power in staying the execution. The reprieve was granted in order that the case may be carried to the supreme court of the United States for constitutional questions, which were raised at the hearing before Judge Wheelock, sitting as justice of the United States circuit court.

SHOOTING AT CHURCH ON SUNDAY.

Two Negroes Stop Balls but Neither is Seriously Hurt.

NO ARRESTS YET MADE,

But Authorities Will Investigate and Sift Matters to the Bottom.

Sunday was a day for shooting. In addition to the two shootings given elsewhere, the day was made lively by the colored population in the neighborhood of Walnut Grove church, on the Bradshaw road, seven or eight miles from the city. There was quite a gathering of negroes at the church and all seemed to be getting along smoothly until two of them, Jim Garrott and Thomas Tuck got into a quarrel over some trivial matter. It is rumored that there was but little waste of words until pistols were drawn. Some of the rumors in circulation say that several pistols were drawn and when the first shot was heard the crowd began to seek cover before a general firing began; that probably half a dozen took a hand but most of them proved to be poor marksmen. When the report first came to the city it seemed that two or three of the belligerents had hit the dust, but an investigation developed that only two negroes had been injured. Jim Garrott received a slight wound from somebody's gun and Tom Tuck stopped another ball from a pistol in the hands of another unknown party.

NARROW ESCAPE.

Of Two Hopkins County Ladies Struck by Lightning

A buggy in which Mrs. Walter Windeligan, of Earlington, and Mrs. Buck Oates, of White Plains, were riding Friday, near Nortonville, was struck by lightning and demolished. The horse tore loose and ran away. Mrs. Windeligan was rendered unconscious, but soon recovered. Mrs. Oates was uninjured. Mrs. Oates was in another buggy a little ahead of them. The ladies are daughters of Mr. E. F. Blakeley, of this city.

THIRTY APPLICANTS

For Certificates to Teach Colored Schools.

At the examination of colored applicants for certificates to teach in the colored public schools of Christian county held here Friday and Saturday, there were thirty applicants. Of this number twenty-seven are females. The papers will be graded by the board this week.

Brothers-in-Law Killed Him.

At Providence, Ky., Friday, Gillson Teague, a stock buyer, was shot and killed by Bob and Joe Crenshaw, brothers of his divorced wife. There was no witness except the woman.

His Shot Fatal.

At Winchester, Ky., June 24, Matt Tracey, son of S. P. Tracey, superintendent of schools of Powell county, to-day it is alleged, shot and fatally wounded a young man named Ware, son of ex Sheriff P. W. Ware.

A NEGRO SHOT SUNDAY ON MAIN STREET.

Bill Barker, col., and Arthur Miles Show Poor Marksmanship.

NEGRO SLIGHTLY HURT.

Miles Now in Jail and the Negro Is Laid Up With Bullet in Foot.

Seventh and Main streets was the scene of a duel between Arthur Miles, a white man, and Will Barker, a negro, last Sunday afternoon about 2 o'clock.

It is said that the principals in the affair have been employed by the Cumberland Telephone company, and during the past week had been working on one of the country lines, Barker being the driver of the wagon that carried the workmen back and forth from the city. Barker is said to be quite "ticklish" and on the return of the hands to the city Saturday afternoon one of the men in the wagon "tickled" Barker, when he struck backwards with his whip, the lash striking Miles, the white man.

From what we can learn, it seems that the little episode in the wagon had engendered bad feeling in both of the men, or, as subsequent remarks by Miles indicate, particularly on the part of Barker. It is said that while Miles was in the fruit store at Virginia and Sixth streets, he asked some one to loan him a pistol. Being asked what he wanted with it, he replied, "that negro out there has been following me." After some one had loaned him a pistol he went out on the street and told Barker not to follow him any more. Getting as far as Seventh and Main streets, Miles saw his man coming toward him, and one version of the duel is that Barker jumped behind a telephone pole and drew his pistol. Another story goes that Miles drew his pistol before the negro got behind the telephone pole. Reports as to who fired the first shot are conflicting, but neither of them is liable to become a rival of Buffalo Bill. Barker's shot went wild of its mark, and Miles' shot was too low for serious damage, as it buried itself in the negro's left foot, breaking two or three bones. Barker was put on bond and Miles was taken to jail to await his examining trial before the county judge.

CAMPMEETING

Ten Days' Series to Be Held In Hopkinsville.

Rev. J. O. McClernan, of Nashville, and his workers, will begin a series of meetings here July 7. The campmeeting will be held in a tent on South Walnut street, near the Sharp homestead and there will be three services each day—morning, afternoon and evening. The services will last about ten days. Everybody is invited to attend.

Circuit Court.

The petit jurors were discharged from further service Saturday and this week will be consumed in the disposition of equity matters. The case of Mrs. Catherine N. Dinneen against the city of Hopkinsville, was on motion of the attorney for the plaintiff, dismissed without prejudice. Court will adjourn Saturday.

A Scheme in Decoration

By OLIVIA BARTON STROHM

"As up the street, with girl we meet
With looks as shy,
Would cry, 'My love,
Oh, isn't he a darling, the bold soldier boy?'"

So sang Lucy as she arranged the cakes and pies temptingly in the window. For the procession was to pass that way, and things must look nice. Lucy made extra effort to place the best doughnuts in the furthest corner for with this excuse she could see the other bakery on the opposite side of the street. The day there was out side, and at sight of the girl he waved a flag—which, however, he suddenly slipped behind his back, for at that moment his employer, Silas Briggs, appeared, and as he entered the shop the clerk obediently followed him, with a final swing of the flag over his shoulder in the direction of the rival bakery. "Lucy!" sharply called a voice, and the girl left the window. "Yes, Miss Briggs."

"Go down the street a-ways, and see if the other place is decorated yet, I thought I saw that whipper-snapper of a clerk buying some flags."

Lucy obeyed with dutiful alacrity, but came slowly back. "Not a sign of flag nor drape, ma'am, anywhere about it. Ours looks just grand, though."

"I noticed," granted her mistress, "that you stayed a long time in the middle of the street watching it. Reminds me of a Bill Plato I used to know; every time he changed a thing in his show window he'd take a chair out in front and sit awhile admiring it."

Mrs. Jane Briggs advertised home-made cakes and pies, and had a flourishing trade. Indeed, people said that since she left her husband and started in business in opposition, he had been losing money. "Hard times to lose a wife and customers at once," they said. But nobody pitied Silas Briggs; he was reputed hard, narrow and morose. It was common gossip that his refusal to contribute to a Decoration day fund was the immediate cause of the separation from his wife. "A man that takes no interest in his day—a man that's too stingy to honor the graves of those boys, blue or gray, is no man for me!"

That was a year ago, and in his shop to-day there were the same dingy shutters, the same weather-beaten door, the same poor display in the curtained window.

An hour before the procession started Silas Briggs announced to his clerk: "I'm going out now, Jackson; now, before the mob gets started. Take care of things while I'm away."

Young Jackson followed him to the door, where he muttered course to say: "Then you don't care about flags, or—anything in front during the—"

"No; I haven't a cent of money nor a minute of time to spare on such trash." And his employer withdrew, banging the door.

When he was out of sight, Jackson advanced to the sidewalk and waved his flag. He fancied a wreath in Lucy's window moved, but he was sure. A moment after he saw Mrs. Briggs go out and disappear in the direction of the cemetery.

And then both bake shops were temporarily abandoned, while the clerks held a conference on the street, each keeping an eye on their respective doors.

Meanwhile Mrs. Briggs hurried along to a neighbor she confided: "I'm in a hurry to meet the committee at the cemetery. You know we arrange things before the parade gets there."

But Mrs. Briggs did not confide to anybody her first errand.

In a lonely part of the grounds was a poorly-kept lot, with a few leaning headstones, straggling weeds and a rusty railing. According to the inscriptions, in spite of neglect, they rested in peace all of the Briggs family for generations—if little cared-for, caring less.

Mrs. Briggs looked cautiously about before entering. Then from her basket she drew the richest bunch of roses and laid it on the central mound against the stone whereon was cut the one word: "Mother."

Bending over to arrange the blossoms, she spoke half aloud: "You were good to me for years, Mother Briggs; it ain't your fault."

"I reckon it's mine, Jane," a voice said, and, looking up, she saw her husband bending over the gate.

There was an awkward pause, then, creaking, Jane said: "It may be mine, too, Silas, but it surely ain't hers. She was always like a mother to me."

"I'm glad you didn't forget her to-day," the man said.

Then he opened the gate, and standing on the opposite side of the mound, placed roses too—his red roses mingling with her white ones in a common memory of the dead.

And thus, the mother's grave between them, Jane Briggs looked into her husband's eyes until she could no longer see to read the yearning there. Then, without a word, she left him.

It was late in the afternoon when the services were over. Every soldier, blue or gray, slept beneath a bank of daisies, cannon, too, the wreaths of smoke forever lifted, wore wreaths of ivy green.

But Silas Briggs did not wait for the celebration to end. He lost Jane in the crowd, so, silent and forlorn, he retraced his steps to the village, and—but that his shop—that place with flags in the window and bunting over the door? Impossible! But there were the curaways—sets of cookies, the fluted rolls, flaked by sheets of flypaper. When he opened the door the bell gave its accustomed tinkle, and—to crown all—there was Jackson—but not alone. Lucy was there, and her cheeks outflamed the cockade on her breast, as the youth began his explanation: "You said you didn't care to spend time and money, Mr. Briggs, but—but it was my time, you see, sir, and—

and my money, and—"

But Silas could reply the bell tinkled, and in walked Jane. She was evidently embarrassed, but had a ready excuse for her appearance in a demand upon Lucy for the key of the shop.

Nobody spoke for a moment; a street band struck up a march, and all four were silent while it passed. Lucy and Jackson exchanging stolen glances, Silas stroking the cat that had come in with Jane, the latter nervously twirling the key.

"Why don't you sit down, Jane?" and Silas brought forward a stool, adding: "I thank you for what you did to-day—decorating, you know," he blundered.

"And I thank you for what you did to-day—decorating, too," and she pointed to the flags and drapery all about.

"That was why I came in—it looked almost like an invitation, you see," Jane ended, blushing vividly.

Her husband threw an imploring glance at the young people. Jackson nodded knowingly, his finger to his lip; Lucy gave a wise little nod.

Reassured, Silas brought another stool close to hers. "But since you are here, Jane, dear, don't you think you might as well stay?"

For answer, Jane simply laid her hand in his; then, turning to the girl: "Here is the key, Lucy," she said, "you and Jackson may open the shop."

PRESENT MEANING.

Memorial Day Has Different Significance to Generation of To-Day Than It Had to Past.

As farther and farther in the dim background recedes memories of our civil war, there is noticed more and more change in Memorial day suggestion.

The little children that now celebrate May 30 are quite innocent of thought of bloodshed and ruin of war; their minds are filled with a gentle, lovely custom, the recurrence of a "very pleasant day when they are taken out to a sunny tree-embowered place and bidden strew flowers on mounds of green grass. The time of year, the hushed attitude of the people, are significant of joy and peace, rather than grief or turmoil. Memorial day, a national holiday, should but blind closer north and south.

And those that hear the story have its horrors softened by the distance of past years; while they may thrill at story of hero and patriot, the bitterness of the fratricidal war is not felt. It is well to tell the stories, but best, it seems to us, is the lesson of remembrance, of loyalty and unbroken love, taught by the flowers on the graves.

Our fall festival of Thanksgiving is the world-wide harvest home, as well as the Puritan holiday, the return of thanks for relief of that distressed colony. Memorial day, celebrated the country over, is now more than a tribute to the soldiers—though that is of itself worthy. Little by little, without conscious effort, the day has become a day for remembrance of the citizen dead, too, a day when the work-wear, world-weary has a moment to take remembrance of past days, past kindred and friends. The soldiers that are left decorate the graves of comrades—by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

JOS. W. CAMPBELL
DIED FRIDAY
IN 80TH YEAR.

Was Last But Two of a
Once Large Family.

ILL BUT TEN DAYS.

A Man of the Highest Sense of Honor and Integrity.

Mr. Joseph W. Campbell died Friday night last at the age of 80 years. He lived but about ten days after being taken down with flux.

In the passing of Mr. Campbell Hopkinsville has lost another of its oldest and most respected citizens. Mr. Campbell was what might be called, by persons who did not know him well, a "unique" character. Indeed, he was unique in the fullest sense of the term. To those who knew him best he was the soul of honor. He was a man of the highest conception of honesty and integrity. One who was guilty of a dishonest act never found sympathy with Mr. Campbell. He had a sympathetic heart, and those in trouble and adversity were more the object of his thoughts than the prosperous and joyous. He never sought popularity or advancement but was what was called a retiring man. Were his charitable deeds known to the world but few in our midst would be credited with having done more to supply the needs of the deserving than he. Mr. Campbell was educated at Georgetown college and retained more of what he read than the average man. Few men in our midst were better informed as to current events than he. He was a great lover of home but not a recluse. There was nothing small about him, though he was most positive in his convictions and rarely ever swayed from opinions when once formed.

Mr. Campbell was a son of John P. Campbell, Sr., President of the Bank of Hopkinsville when the civil war closed and probably the wealthiest man in the city or county at that time. The deceased had four sisters and three brothers, only two of whom survive him, Mrs. Cook the wife of Dr. E. R. Cook, and Mrs. Sue Faulkner, of Virginia. Mr. Campbell was married in 1858 to Miss Margaret Beazley, who bore him two daughters, Mrs. Henry D. Wallace and Miss Bettie Campbell. Mrs. Campbell died many years since. The Hon. John P. Campbell, Jr., who represented this district in Congress, was a younger brother and Mr. James V. Campbell, the father of Mrs. John R. Green was the oldest brother of the family.

Dr. C. H. Nash conducted the funeral services at his late residence Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock and his remains were laid to rest in Hopewell cemetery.

IN SERVICE AND RATES.

People Owe Much To The Company That Brought Competition.

It has now been just about one year since the Hopkinsville Home Telephone Company began to get ready to give telephone service to the citizens of Hopkinsville, and we feel it due to the company and to its stockholders and patrons to state the many advantages that have been gained through the advent of this enterprise.

When the Hopkinsville Home Telephone Company was first organized, a great many people seemed to doubt whether the exchange would ever be built, and in case it was, whether it would ever give a better service than the already rotten one that they were receiving from the Cumberland Company. At the time they first began construction, the Cumberland Company made every attempt to block their progress and to the extent that they went out and stated to the citizens of Hopkinsville that if they would refuse to sign any contract with the Home Company they would give those who refused free county service. This move on the part of the Cumberland Telephone Company only went to show that, for the time being, they were willing to give this free county service to our citizens, not because of their love for the people, but because they thought by so doing, they would be able to keep the Home Telephone Company from doing business.

Prior to this time, the citizens of Hopkinsville had been laboring with the Cumberland Company to give them better service and, if possible, to reduce their rates, but in confronting the officials of the Cumberland Company with the proposition, the only satisfaction that the representative citizens got from them was that the Cumberland Company would not improve their service unless they increased their rates and before they did make an improvement without increasing their rates they would move out of the city. It is not worth while for us to dwell upon the class of service that was given by the Cumberland Telephone Company prior to the advent of the Home Telephone Company, because every citizen of Hopkinsville who is not directly or indirectly associated with the Cumberland Telephone Company knows it was beyond all question about as rotten as could be thought of.

However, as soon as the Home Telephone Company began active work and the Cumberland Telephone Company realized that they were going to do business, they at once gave up the idea of trying to do business in competition with the rotten and out-of-date service and at once began to reconstruct their entire plant from beginning to end and after that was done, they came out in the paper and made the statement that owing to the improved service and the increased number of subscribers they could afford to reduce their rates.

If such be the case, it is very funny to the average subscriber why it is that the rates are higher in Evansville, Nashville and Louisville, if they can afford to reduce their rates on account of the increased number of subscribers and the improvement of service, because in all three of these cities there is a much larger number of subscribers than there are in Hopkinsville. It is also very strange that the Cumberland Telephone Company could not have done this prior to competition as well as after and it is also strange why it is or why it was that they stated that before they would reduce their rates they would move out of town.

There are many places in Christian county today where they are now receiving county service for $1.65 per month, whereas before competition they were paying $4.15 per month. Not only that, but prior to competition, there was not a citizen in Christian county who was receiving good telephone service and in addition to paying higher rates, each and every subscriber was compelled to pay a toll rate from fifteen to twenty-five cents per message every time it was necessary for him to telephone outside of the town exclusive of which he was connected. Therefore, when everything is taken into consideration and is weighed by all business men and all subscribers who are interested in good telephone service, each and every one can readily see the benefits that have been received by and through the Home Telephone Company have been the means of not only giving us a first class service in every particular, but it has been the means of giving us reasonable rates, and in addition to increasing the number of people to whom we can talk without toll messages, has been the means of saving to the people of Christian county no less than $20,000 a year.

The Home Telephone Company from the beginning up to the present time has fulfilled its every promise and has given to its subscribers a service that is unequalled and unsurpassed anywhere in the state of Kentucky today and when all things are considered, there is no public serving enterprise or no company in our county that is more deserving of the public support in every way than is the Hopkinsville Home Telephone Company.

We wish to give due credit and due justice to all the enterprises of Christian county and in face of the conditions as they existed before and after competition, we cannot too strongly state that the Home Telephone Company is the only telephone company that is entitled to the just support of the citizens of Christian county.

Gowns for the Trousseau

AT A JUNE WEDDING.

With all the American's new demand for change, novelty, in fashions of dress and of house, in almost everything, still she keeps quite conservative in regard to the bridal gown. Of course, unless the bride have been a widow, the dress will be white. Not, however, the stiff, prim, usually unbecoming white satin that for so long considered the only material to be used. Now one need not make the effort to look one's worst on the wedding day. May select some soft, gauzy stuff that will add to what points of beauty are possessed.

The skirt of this material should be made plainer for the bride than for merely ballroom occasions, and the costume as a whole court simplicity. The modish touch will be given in elbow sleeves, deep girdle, and perhaps a fleck of silk moust. This last is chosen often this season, gives the demure look, modest air, custom declares the proper attitude for the new-made wife.

Many a girl who is not moved by stern necessity to economize, still plans to have the wedding gown so fashioned that it can be worn at other than the one great event; to her at-homes in the afternoon, and for different affairs; a lace yoke is made detachable, and the gown serves without it for full dress, with it for less formal demands.

When the material is plain a lace-edged or figured veil is liked; when the dress material is figured plain illusion makes a more effective veil. In choosing one, be sure to have the other shade of the hat. A brown tulle suit makes a good traveling costume, the Havana brown; the skirt and short jacket after a plain tailored model, the reverse of the coat displaying a waistcoat of cream cash. A brown suede belt would give this costume an up-to-date air, and the shir-waist may be, white lingerie, dresses in natural color, or a soft silk of light brown.

Bridesmaids' dresses this spring frequently show a glimpse of green, perhaps the girdle and the flower stems will be all there is, just enough to look cool and dainty. The dresses are all made after the same fashion, the colors the same, to give the best effect as a whole. That of the maid-of-honor may differ without spoiling the picture.

Some brides of this season have scattered here and there in the voluminousness of their silky gauze sprays of bride roses and green leaves, the tiny flowers appear also in the bertha and about the short sleeves. It is really a pretty idea, and does not detract from the simplicity ideal as would trimming of the severe satin, absolutely frilling. It depends on the bride's style; if she be the "skin-ow" sort, let her take to the fluffy, softening gauzes.

Bridal underwear now is marked by daintiness, fineness of material and handwork, rather than wholesale use of cheap lace. The French show much better taste in this direction than we do, who have fallen into the habit of buying cheap, over-trimmed monstrosities from the department stores rather than good materials made at home with good workmanship. Handkerchiefs linen is used by the French for bridal lingerie, soft and fine and hand-embroidered.

The going-away gown, of course, should not be conspicuously bridal. One chosen by a recent bride was of a faint check of mauve and cream, she had a lilac chip trimmed with pale green ribbon and lilac blossoms, the veil the shade of the hat. A brown tulle suit makes a good traveling costume, the Havana brown; the skirt and short jacket after a plain tailored model, the reverse of the coat displaying a waistcoat of cream cash. A brown suede belt would give this costume an up-to-date air, and the shir-waist may be, white lingerie, dresses in natural color, or a soft silk of light brown.

Styles for Lads and Lassies

SENSIBLE FASHIONS.

Little boys now look less Lord Fauntleroyish, more outdoors, sturdy and practical. The former fashion was picturesque, the present is sensible.

The little chap here in linen suit, tie and belt of red. His straight crop of hair seems a fit part of the whole, simple and no-fad-for. Red linen with white dots and the matching is also very good, and one may with almost equal effect choose a good cotton, which is strong, and does not fade any easier than linens.

Pique makes up very nicely for the boy's suit, and both coarse and fine weaves of linen and cotton. For both Russian and sailor suits dark, chambray, seersucker and gingham are used, checks preferred for the smaller boys and plain goods for the older ones. White serge for best is liked, but we consider the mother rather foolish that insists all the suits be of white. Often the colors are more becoming, and certainly for rough wear are more practical. And the best-dressed children nowadays are the sensibly-dressed; we see few frills and furbelows in well-to-do families. Simplicity for children's clothes is the keynote.

Of course, a mother can spend a lot of money in elegant simplicity, and Swiss embroideries and broiderie Anglaise are not bought for a song. Little girls this season will have embroidery rather than the frilled frocks, and gold-colored to the fore as it has not been in years. One can choose daintiness for the small miss, but if she is to be up-to-date, no fussiness. Even with the long dresses for the infant money is spent in hand-work rather than over-trimming. The mother in moderate circumstances is able to follow this lead. Fine hand-tucking is extremely nice, and when an edge of real Val is used at neck and wrist one may have for a small outlay a dress that equals the French importations, but by no means approaches them in price.

The first short frocks are made like the infant's long frock, and have much the same trimming; hand-tucking, hering-bones and embroidery are appropriate trimmings for these dresses that fall straight from neck band or short yoke. It is now considered all right to put the child into light-colored frocks as soon as it can walk, although there should certainly be a goodly supply of white dresses. Some very dainty tiny frocks are seen of pale blue and of pale pink chambray, the trimming feather stitching in white and lace frills at throat and hand of white lace. These, as with colored suits for the boys, are often more becoming than all white, the color intensifying the color of eyes, cheeks and hair. Try it and see.

ELLEN OSMONDE.

Couldn't Stand for "Always." A Scotch laborer who had been in America long enough to lose the brogue got a lay-off to get married. However, he surprised his employer by turning up and going on with his work just as usual.

"Why, John, what are you doing here to-day?" said the foreman. "I thought you were going to be married."

"I was, guv'nor," he replied. "But last night I was seriously thinking about it, and it suddenly struck me it was for all (always), and that's more or less I can stand, so it's off!"--Chicago Tribune.

Well Abroad.

An old lady on board a vessel observed a young man dumping up water to wash the deck and the captain being near, she accosted him as follows: "Well, captain, so you've got a well aboard."

"Yes, ma'am, always carry one," said the polite captain.

"Well, that's clever. It's so much better than not having one, which I always dislike so."--Tit-Bits.

Will It Cure Consumption?

NO, we cannot hold out the promise that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure consumption when thoroughly seated and established. We do not if we will cure even cases, although hundreds have been cured by the "Discovery" after their attending physicians had pronounced their cases to be regular tubercular consumption. The fact is that the "Golden Medical Discovery" does cure severe throat and bronchial affections, lingering coughs, and those obstinate, wasting, "run-down" conditions which, if neglected or improperly treated, run on and terminate in genuine consumption.

We know that thousands of men and women although in the advanced stages of feebleness and emaciation--pallid, wasted and broken-down with all the terrible symptoms of hacking coughs, night-sweats, hectic fever, absolute prostration, and even bleeding from the lungs--have been restored by the use of this marvelous medicine to permanent health, strength and vitality. But it must be taken in time, before the lungs have been filled with tubercular deposits, or have actually begun to break down.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.: Dear Sir--With a grateful heart I write you of the efficacy of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. For many years my health was poor and two years ago I contracted a severe cold which developed into pneumonia. Careful nursing and good medical attendance brought me through this serious sickness, but I was unable to be about again I was fearfully weak. My physician had ordered me to go to a dry climate. His frankly stated that he feared I was in the early stage of consumption and that there was no chance for my recovery unless I had a change of climate. I was thoroughly discouraged and did not give up. I could not very well go away from home, so instead I decided to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The first bottle did not seem to have any effect, but the second bottle greatly benefited me. As I continued taking the medicine I began to gain strength, the troublesome cough and depression gradually disappeared, and I felt bright, cheerful and encouraged. After using the medicine for less than four months I felt entirely well, and have not had any indication of the return of the trouble. The effect of the medicine is little short of marvelous.

Yours truly,

Mrs. JOHN WRIGHT.

MEANING OF SNOW BROWN

Actor Explains Famous Expression in Use Since Henry Irving's Debut in London.

Two actors were dining together in a New York restaurant. They had ordered, for their salad course, artichokes. The waiter came and said:
 "Gentlemen, I regret to inform you that we are out of artichokes."

"Then snow brown," said one of the actors. "In other words, send to the market and get some artichokes for us."

"The waiter bowed and withdrew and the other actor asked:
 "What did you mean by 'snow brown'? You told the waiter to snow brown. What did you mean by it?"

"I meant 'don't give up. Persevere. Don't fail. Do something or other,'" said the first actor. "Snow brown" has meant that ever since the first year of Sir Henry Irving's management of the Lyceum theater.

"Sir Henry was producing a drama that demanded, in one scene, large quantities of snow. White paper, cut fine and packed in a great number of little bags of brown paper, was given to two men perched up aloft and they were told to snow hard and fast from the scene's beginning till the curtain dropped.

"The men obeyed this order too well. They snowed too hard and too fast. Before the scene's end they found their white paper running out. So their snowstorm became feeble and feeble and finally it ceased altogether.

"The hero's next speech was:
 "I cannot see your face, dear heart, for these blinding flakes of snow."

"And no snow, not a drop, was falling.
 "Sir Henry rushed like the wind to the two supers.

"Where's your snow?" he demanded.
 "We have no more white paper," they answered.

"Then snow brown, you fools! Snow brown!" cried Sir Henry.

THE REQUISITE NECESSARY
 Manager Told Theatrical Aspirant That Only Thing Needed Is to Be Well Dressed.

It is told in the Chicago Inter Ocean of an observing theatrical manager that on one occasion he proved fully equal to the stage aspirant problem.

A young woman of that class which the newspaper catalogue as "society women" brought a letter of introduction to a prominent actor-manager which secured for her a brief audience with the man. With one swift glance he took in the plumed hat, the pretty inconsequential little face thrown into oblivion by the plumes, the sable cloak and moleskin gown, the water-lion muff and stepladder shoes.

"Have you ever been in love?" he demanded.

"The word ran the gamut from angry exclamation to dubious interrogation. The actor-manager repeated the question.

"I am married," was the answer.

"But have you ever loved?"
 "I—don't—know."
 "Have you ever hated?"
 "I—don't remember."

"If you had hated, you would remember. Having never really loved or hated you will not make an actress. There is only one thing left for you—musical comedy."

"But I cannot sing."
 "You do not need to sing."

"And I cannot dance."
 "You do not need to dance."

"My husband says I have no sense of humor."
 "You do not need a sense of humor."

"Then what?"
 "You dress well—that's enough."

GREAT OCCASION

Will Be the Coming Teachers' Institute Here.

The Christian County Teachers' Institute will be held in Hopkinsville, beginning at 10 o'clock on Monday morning, July 3, 1905, and continuing five days. Every person holding a teacher's certificate in the county, those who contemplate applying for a certificate, and those holding a state certificate are required by Section 140, Kentucky School Laws, to attend the full session of the institute and pay the fee. This law will be strictly enforced.

It will be gratifying to you to know that we will have for our instructor Dr. Ruric N. Roark, for so long the Dean of Pedagogy in the State College at Lexington. This fact assures us of an interesting and profitable meeting. He is one of the foremost educators in this country and will be a source of help and inspiration to each of us in our work for the coming year. I hope to see each one present during the entire session, not simply as a requirement of the law, but with a sincere desire for improvement in our work and for the benefits to be derived from our association together during the week as well as the new ideas we will receive from our instructor, who has given so much time and thought to the work of the teacher in the district schools of our state.

Thursday will be Trustees' Day. Please urge your trustees to come to the institute as often as possible, but especially on Thursday.

Dr. Roark will make an address on Tuesday night. The Common School Graduation Exercises will take place Thursday night. Excellent music will be rendered on both nights. Make your arrangements to remain in town on these nights.

Please extend a cordial invitation to every one in your district to attend all the sessions of the institute.

Very truly,
KATIE MCDANIEL,
County Superintendent.

There will be a clerk-carrier examination held in this city Wednesday July 5, 1905. For further information apply to W. E. Williamson, Aux. Sec. Local Board.
